A round-trip anchor for the OCR adapter

Chapter One

The first paragraph of the first chapter. Plain English prose with no special characters; the sample exists to anchor the round-trip assertions in tests, not to look like a real book.

A second paragraph follows on the same physical page.

The third page continues the chapter. There is no outline entry for this page; the parser must place the body block here under the existing chapter, with the outline anchored at the chapter's first block on page two.
